Sri Lanka claims international network involved in terror attacks

A D.C. student and Denver man were among the 290 killed.

Sri Lanka said on Monday it was invoking emergency powers in the aftermath of devastating bomb attacks on hotels and churches, blamed on militants with foreign links, which killed 290 people and wounded nearly 500.

The emergency law, which gives police and the military extensive powers to detain and interrogate suspects without court orders, would go into effect at midnight local time, the president's office said.

Colombo, the seaside capital of the Indian Ocean island, was jittery the day after the horrifying Easter Sunday attacks. Police said 87 bomb detonators were found at the city's main bus station, while an explosive went off near a church when bomb squad officials were trying to defuse it. Scores were killed in the church on Sunday.

A night curfew went into effect at 8 p.m.

There was no claim of responsibility for Sunday's attacks but suspicion was focusing on Islamist militants in the Buddhist-majority country.

Investigators said seven suicide bombers took part in the attacks, while a government spokesman said an international network was involved.

Police had received a tip-off of a possible attack on churches by a little-known domestic Islamist group this month, according to a document seen by Reuters.

The intelligence report, dated April 11, said a foreign intelligence agency had warned authorities of possible attacks on churches by the National Thawheed Jama'ut. It was not immediately clear what action, if any, was taken in response to the tip-off.

International anti-terrorism experts said even if a local group had carried out the attacks, it was likely that al Qaeda or Islamic State were involved, given the level of sophistication.

Two of the suicide bombers blew themselves up at the Shangri-La Hotel on Colombo's seafloor, said Ariyananda Welian-ga, an official at the government's forensic division. The others targeted three churches and two other hotels.

A fourth hotel and a house in a suburb of the capital Colombo were also hit, but it was not immediately clear how those attacks were carried out.

"Still the investigations are going on," Welian-ga said.

Police said 24 people had been arrested, all of whom were Sri Lankan, but they gave no more details. Most of the attacks came during Easter services and when hotel guests were sitting down for breakfast buffets.

"Guests who had come for breakfast were lying on the floor, blood all over," an employee at Kingsbury Hotel told Reuters.

A fifth-grader among the Americans killed

A fifth-grade student at an exclusive private school in Washington, D.C., and a Denver man on a business trip were among the U.S. residents killed in the Sri Lanka Easter attacks, a media report and the man's employer said on Monday.

U.S. Secretary of State Mike Pompeo said "several" Americans were killed without providing a precise number.

Kieran Shafritz de Zoy-sa, a fifth-grader at Sidwell Friends, died in one of the blasts, the school emailed to friends and family, according to CNN. Fifth-graders are around 10 years old. Staff at the school did not respond to requests for confirmation.

"Passionate about learning, he adored his friends, and was incredibly excited about returning to Sidwell Friends in the coming school year," school principal Mamadou Gueye wrote in the email, CNN reported.

The boy's citizenship was unknown.

Sidwell Friends is the school where President Barack Obama's daughters Sasha and Malia and President Bill Clinton's daughter Chelsea attended.

Dieter Kowalski, a Wisconsin native who lived in Denver, was also among the victims. He was on a business trip for the British education publishing company Pearson, which has 800 employees in Sri Lanka.

"Dieter had just arrived at his hotel, where many of our colleagues have stayed over the years, when he was killed in an explosion," Pearson CEO John Fallon said on LinkedIn.

All other Pearson employees in Sri Lanka have been accounted for, Scott Overland, a Pearson spokesman, wrote in an email.

A senior leader on a technical services team, Kowalski was on assignment to work with local Pearson engineering teams, Fallon said. "Colleagues who knew Dieter well talk about how much fun he was to be around, how big-hearted and full-spirited he was. They tell of a man to whom we could give our ugliest and most challenging of engineering problems, knowing full well that he would jump straight in and help us figure it out," Fallon said.

Kowalski himself appeared enthusiastic about his trip, posting a map on Facebook showing the path from Denver to Colombo.

"And the fun begins. Love these work trips. 24 hours of flying. See you soon Sri Lanka!" Kowalski said in his final Facebook post on Friday.

The comments section became a forum for condolences from more than 200 people. REUTERS

Trump sues to block Congress finance subpoena

2 President Donald Trump on Monday filed suit to keep U.S. lawmakers from obtaining his financial records, the first salvo in what promises to be an escalating legal battle with Democrats in Congress. The suit seeks to block a subpoena issued by the Democratic chairman of the U.S. House Oversight Committee for information about Trump's personal and business finances, alleging Democrats have launched "all-out political war" on

Trump with subpoenas as their "weapon of choice." Elijah Cummings, the House Oversight Committee chairman, issued the subpoena to the president's accountant after Trump's former lawyer, Michael Cohen, testified to Congress in February that Trump had misrepresented his net worth. "Chairman Cummings' subpoena is invalid and unenforceable because it has no legitimate legislative purpose," Trump's lawyers said in a filing. REUTERS

Samsung delays public rollout of Galaxy Fold

3 Samsung said on Monday it will delay the public rollout of its Galaxy Fold without giving a new release date. The announcement comes days after some reviewers of the splashy $1,980 foldable handset reported problems with their test units after just a day or two of use. Samsung postponed media events for the device planned for this week in Hong Kong and Shanghai. "To fully evaluate this feedback and run further internal tests, we have decided to delay the release of the Galaxy Fold," a Samsung rep said. Instead of plaudits ahead of the phone's previously planned launch on April 26 in the U.S., the South Korean conglomerate has been blighted by technology journalists reporting breaks, bulges and blinking screens, raising the specter of the combustible Galaxy Note 7 three years ago which the firm ultimately pulled from shelves at massive cost. REUTERS

Warren proposes canceling billions in student loan debt

4 U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for the 2020 presidential election, wants to cancel billions of dollars in student loan debt and make college cheaper for students going forward. Warren, in a post on the website Medium, proposed canceling $50,000 in student loan debt for anyone with annual household income under $100,000, which her campaign said would amount to 42 million Americans. It would also cancel some debt for those with household incomes between $100,000 and $250,000. Warren, who has long advocated in Congress for providing debt relief to students, called student loan debt a "crisis." She said canceling debt for millions of people would help close the nation's racial and wealth gap, and also proposed making all two-year and four-year public colleges free. REUTERS

Demand Soars At NYC Medical Clinic For Promising Back Pain Treatment

Can This Medical Technology Possibly Eliminate Or Greatly Reduce Even The Most Severe Back Pain... Almost Instantly?

The Advanced Medical Treatment Every Back & Neck Pain Sufferer Needs To Know - No Matter How Bad The Pain Is Or How Many Other Treatments Have Failed

NYC Pain MD is a medical clinic with two locations in New York City that has made a name for itself by treating the worst cases of back or neck pain.

Here is what every back and neck pain sufferer who has failed to respond to other treatments and does not want surgery should know about one of the best treatment options available today for severe back and neck pain including when, why and where you should consider this treatment to get maximum results.

If you suffer with back, neck or nerve pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications.

Experienced doctors understand that even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for back pain... they are rarely the answer.

In most cases they have minimal, short term results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there is very good option to help relieve the pain.

An option that a lot of back and neck pain sufferers may have never heard of before.

Before we get into these treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated the worst cases of back pain. Patients travel from all over to be treated at one of their clinics for all sorts of joint and muscle pain because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover is a REAL medical treatment. Not some miracle cure you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no one treatment that will help every case of back pain.

And we cannot guarantee this treatment will work for you. But this treatment has already helped countless back and neck pain sufferers who had given up hope. I bet many just like you.

What is this treatment? It's called...

Radiofrequency Neurotomy

"Radiofrequency Neurotomy" is often referred to as RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

There are many nerves around your spine and one of their jobs is to sense PAIN.

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to these nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, the Radio Frequency Neurotomy is scheduled and performed for longer term relief.

What Results Can You Expect?

Like all real medical procedures... results vary for individual patients. No good and ethical doctor would guarantee any exact results for any procedure... that's just not how things work and it would be less than honest.

That's being said, it is not uncommon for patients to get complete, if not significant relief of their pain shortly after the treatment.

How Long Do The Results Last?

This procedure "blocks" the nerves pain signals... it does not destroy them. Therefore, the results are safe but not completely permanent. But, many patients get relief for 6 months... 12 months.... 18 months for some and some even longer. The great news is - another procedure can be safely preformed for more relief if necessary.

Advanced Treatment Uses Radio Frequencies To Relieve Serious Neck & Back Pain

Science rescues back & neck pain sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

While we cannot claim this is a complete "permanent cure" but... it can be a god-send for so many who were in constant pain.

Really... what would it be worth it to you could get out of pain for long enough so you could start enjoying your everyday life again?

Would it be worth it to be able to finally get a good nights sleep again?

How about being able to go for a simple walk or just do your basic daily chores without worrying about so much pain?

Is It Safe?

Yes. This procedure has been done countless times and continues to have an excellent safety record. It is minimally invasive and is not surgical.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and physical therapy do not offer good enough results.

RF has also been found effective AFTER back surgery when patient's still feel pain.

The pain after a failed back surgery can be debilitating for some and this procedure may be the only thing that helps give you relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain And The "X" Factor

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treatment or not.

Many experts suggest choosing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most advanced technology all under one roof without the need for a surgical center or hospital.

Major Savings In Time And Costs Of Care?

NYC Pain MD's method allows you to avoid expensive hospital or out patient surgical-center facility fees which often run 3 to 4 times the cost of the procedure itself. And you don't have to go through the huge stress and time consuming process of going all over the city to outside centers. All the NYC Pain MD treatments can be done in out in-office procedure suites saving you stress, time and dollars. NYC Pain MD believes this additional "X" factor is one of the reasons so many back pain sufferers travel from all over to be treated at one of their advanced medical clinics.

The $14 billion in legislation and investments aims to cut emissions by 30 percent by 2030.

letters@metro.us

New York City on Earth Day released the OneNYC 2050 blueprint of its Green New Deal, a $14 billion effort that aims to cut 30 percent of greenhouse emissions by 2030 while creating "tens of thousands of good jobs."

"Every day we wait is a day our planet gets closer to the point of no return. New York City's Green New Deal meets that reality head on," Mayor Bill de Blasio said in a statement Monday. "We are confronting the same interests that created the climate crisis and deepened inequality. There's no time to waste. We're taking action now, before it's too late."

City officials intend to pursue steep cuts in greenhouse gas emissions from buildings and source 100 percent clean electricity while creating green jobs and holding polluters responsible for climate-related costs by 2050. New York City is the first city in the world to require all large existing buildings of 25,000 square feet or more to lower their energy usage and emissions. NYC has 50,000 buildings of this size citywide. The city is also banning all-glass facades in new construction unless they meet strict performance guidelines, making inefficient glass-heavy building designs a thing of the past.

"Here in New York City, we recognize our climate crisis for what it is: an emergency. Also that what matters most is not words, but action," Daniel Zarrilli, NYC's chief climate policy adviser and OneNYC director, said in a press release.

"With today's release of OneNYC 2050, we are demonstrating to the world what a Green New Deal looks like in practice. Taking on the fossil fuel industry, getting our emissions to net-zero, building greater resiliency citywide, and creating an inclusive economy. These may not be easy, but they are necessary if we are to secure a livable future for the next generation. And by taking action now, we are building a strong and fair city for all New Yorkers."

De Blasio said that New York City will also guarantee health care for every New Yorker and create universal coverage for uninsured New Yorkers regardless of ability to pay or immigration status. This health care push includes new efforts in combating the opioid epidemic and deploying engagement teams alongside first responders to support people with mental health and substance abuse issues. Other goals include improving transit systems and road conditions, plus a $20 billion resiliency plan to address "the growing threats of coastal storms, sea-level rise, extreme heat, and increased precipitation with projects and programs across the city."

Supreme Court takes up major gay, transgender job discrimination cases

Trump's administration has argued that Title VII does not cover sexual orientation or gender identity.

The Supreme Court on Monday agreed to decide whether U.S. law banning workplace discrimination on the basis of sex protects gay and transgender workers, as the conservative-majority court waded into a fierce dispute involving a divisive social issue.

At issue in the high-profile legal fight is whether gay and transgender people are covered by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, which bans employers from discriminating against employees on the basis of sex as well as race, color, national origin and religion. President Donald Trump's administration has argued that Title VII does not cover sexual orientation or gender identity.

The court, whose 5-4 conservative majority includes two Trump appointees, will take up two cases concerning gay people who have said they were fired due to their sexual orientation, one involving a New York skydiving instructor named Donald Zarda and another involving a former county child-welfare services coordinator from Georgia named Gerald Bostock.

The court also will hear a Detroit funeral home's bid to reverse a ruling that it violated federal law by firing a transgender funeral director named Aimee Stephens after Stephens revealed plans to transition from male to female.

The justices will hear arguments and issue a ruling in their next term, which starts in October.

Trump's administration reversed the approach taken under Democratic former President Barack Obama by the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), which enforces federal laws banning workplace discrimination.

"The American public would be shocked if the Supreme Court ruled that it's perfectly legal to fire someone because she is transgender or lesbian. That doesn't fit with American values of fair play and the idea that you should be judged on your work and not on who you are," said James Esseks, a lawyer with the American Civil Liberties Union, which represents two of the employees.

The U.S. Supreme Court building.

The Title VII fight marks the court's first major test on a contentious social issue since Trump's appointee Brett Kavanaugh joined it in October after a difficult Senate confirmation process.

Kavanaugh replaced

retired Justice Anthony Kennedy, a conservative noted for supporting gay rights, and could provide a pivotal vote on the issue. Kennedy wrote the court's 5-4 2015 ruling legalizing gay marriage nationally, a landmark for U.S. gay rights, and its important 2003 ruling striking down laws criminalizing gay sex.

Kavanaugh's approach to gay rights is unknown, having not been involved in any major cases on the issue as an appeals court judge before becoming a justice. Trump's other Supreme Court appointee is fellow conservative Neil Gorsuch.

Trump, a Republican with strong support among evangelical Christian voters, has taken aim at gay rights and transgender rights. His Justice Department at the Supreme Court supported the right of certain businesses to refuse to serve gay people on the basis of religious objections to gay marriage.

His administration also restricted transgender service members in the military and rescinded protections regarding bathroom access for transgender students in public schools. REUTERS

Leader of armed group boasted of assassination training targeting Obama, Hillary Clinton: FBI

The leader of an armed group stopping undocumented migrants who cross into the United States from Mexico has boasted that his members had trained to assassinate former President Barack Obama and former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, an FBI agent said in court papers on Monday.

Larry Hopkins was arrested Saturday on a weapons charge. His camouflage-wearing, armed United Constitutional Patriots members claim to have helped U.S. officials detain some 5,600 migrants in New Mexico in the last 60 days.

The UCP says its two-month presence at the border is intended to support U.S. Border Patrol, which has been overwhelmed by record numbers of Central American families seeking asylum.

U.S. soldiers walk next to the border fence between Mexico and the U.S., as migrants are seen walking behind the fence, after crossing illegally into the U.S. to turn themselves in, in El Paso, Texas. The writing on the wall reads, "Help us Jesus Christ." REUTERS

Critics including the American Civil Liberties Union accuse the UCP of being a "fascist militia" whose members illegally detain and kidnap migrants by impersonating law enforcement. New Mexico's Democratic governor, Michelle Lujan Grisham, on Friday ordered an investigation of the group. She said "menacing or threatening migrant families and asylum-seekers is absolutely unacceptable and must cease."

The FBI in court papers said that while it was investigating allegations of "militia extremist activity" in 2017, witnesses accused Hopkins of saying the UCP was planning to assassinate Obama, former Democratic presidential candidate Clinton and financier George Soros.

On Monday, Hopkins appeared in court in Las Cruces, New Mexico, to face charges of being a felon in possession of a firearm. The FBI said it found guns during a 2017 visit to his home.

Defense attorney Kelly O'Connell said Hopkins planned to plead not guilty and noted that the charges were unrelated to UCP's actions at the border.

"This is not even dealing with what's going on right here," O'Connell said.

UCP spokesman Jim Benvie previously said the group was helping the U.S. Border Patrol and publicizing the "border crisis." He was not immediately available for comment.

Crowdfunding sites PayPal and GoFundMe last week barred the group, citing policies not to promote hate or violence, after the ACLU called the UCP a "fascist militia."

FBI Special Agent David Gabriel said in a criminal complaint filed on Monday that in October 2017 the agency received reports a militia was being run out of Hopkins' home in Flora Vista, New Mexico.

PISTOLS, RIFLES

When agents entered the home they collected nine firearms, ranging from pistols to rifles, that Horton was illegally in possession of as he had at least one prior felony conviction, according to the complaint. The FBI said in court papers that in 2006, Hopkins was convicted of criminal impersonation of a peace officer and felony possession of a firearm, and that in 1996 he was also convicted on a firearms charge. On staff following orders, Trump says: 'Nobody disobeys me'

The Mueller report found instances of the president "exerting undue influence."

President Donald Trump dismissed questions from reporters on Monday about his staff's reluctance to carry out his orders and the chances of impeachment proceedings in the U.S. Congress, days after the Mueller report highlighted both issues.

The 448-page report from U.S. Special Counsel Robert Mueller on his investigation into Russian interference in the 2016 U.S. election revealed staff and associates sometimes ignored requests from Trump to deliver messages, including one to fire Mueller.

"Nobody disobeys me," Republican Trump said when asked if he was worried about his orders not being followed. He made the remark at the White House during an annual Easter celebration.

Mueller's report said that the 22-month investigation did not establish that the Trump campaign coordinated with Russians during the 2016 election campaign, but Mueller did find "multiple acts by the president that were capable of exerting undue influence over law enforcement investigations."

According to the report, White House Counsel Don McGahn had been on the brink of resigning when Trump told him to ask Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein to fire Mueller. Trump then denied using the word "fire," according to McGahn's retelling to Mueller.

Trump lashed out at the report on Twitter later on Monday.

"Isn't it amazing that the people who were closest to me, by far, and knew the Campaign better than anyone, were never even called to testify before Mueller," Trump wrote.

Mueller's report drew upon interviews, notes and communications with Trump advisers. Trump's personal lawyer during the campaign, Michael Cohen, pleaded guilty to crimes as did campaign chairman Paul Manafort and Trump's first national security adviser, Michael Flynn.

Asked on Monday whether he was concerned about the threat of impeachment on allegations of obstruction of justice as some Democrats have called for, Trump said, "Not even a little bit."

"Isn't it amazing that the people who were closest to me, by far, and knew the Campaign better than anyone, were never even called to testify before Mueller."

President Trump, on Twitter

U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren, who is running for the Democratic presidential nomination, on Friday said Congress should begin the process of removing Trump from office. Other Democratic leaders have played down talk of impeachment, just 18 months before the 2020 election.

Republicans have stood by Trump and while an impeachment effort might succeed in the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives, it was unlikely to do so in the Republican-led Senate. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi said on Monday House Democrats' views vary on how to proceed.

Trump, speaking from the White House balcony on Monday, returned to favorite topics of his by touting the strong United States economy and saying his administration was rebuilding the military "to a level never seen before."

"Our country is doing fantastically well, probably the best it has ever done economically," he said. REUTERS

Why Aren't Doctors Telling Knee Arthritis Sufferers About These Two Often Successful Treatments?

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

NYC -If you suffer with knee arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments... especially countless pain medications. With minimal or no results

Are there any better options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis a lot of knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

NYC Pain MD is a REAL medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers. Patients travel from all over the state to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available.

What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation - the good and the bad....

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee. In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid."

Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make synovial fluid-like compounds that... during viscosupplementation treatments... doctors precisely inject directly into the knee joint.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the procedure is slightly off, the formula will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at NYC Pain MD use advanced digital imaging so they visually guide the injection accurately into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that performing joint injections without imaging miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have had prior viscosupplementation without this special digital imaging without good results - this may be the exact reason why.

That's why NYC Pain MD even takes it one step further. They do not just use one form of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation "medicines" also come in several different formulas.

Just like all medications, some people respond better to one than another. While many doctors only use one formula, the experts at NYC Pain MD use several and great effort is taken to figure out what the best one is for you.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

#2 Radiofrequency Neurotomy

This treatment is called, "Radiofrequency Neurotomy." RF for short RF is a procedure that is based on the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are known as "Genicular nerves."

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to the Genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerves.

Two procedures are performed. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" procedure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, Genicular Neurotomy (GRF) is performed for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published November 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1, 4 and 12 weeks, respectively. No patient reported a post-procedure adverse event during the follow-up period. RF neurotomy of

Advanced Imaging Allows Doctors To Pin-Point Treatments And Relieve Knee Arthritis Pain

Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers? Research shows joint injections done without advanced imaging misses the joint about 30% of the time. Now doctors can put lubricating fluid directly into the arthritis joint that may alleviate pain and restore function to many.

Genicular nerves leads to significant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee OA pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication, physical rehab or viscosupplementation do not offer good enough results.

RF may be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

But - RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be debilitating and this procedure may be the only thing that helps and give you after surgery relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

NYC Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary knee arthritis screenings every month. These screenings are a way for knee arthritis sufferers to get their questions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NYC Pain MD. If you would like to schedule a screening, just call 877-380-8537.

The screenings fill up fast every month. This screening is no cost and there absolutely no obligation.

More good news: for qualified candidates, insurances and Medicare often cover these treatments.

Cain withdraws from consideration for Federal Reserve seat

Cain's bid for president in 2012 was derailed by accusations of sexual harassment.

Cain has been a public advocate of many of Trump's policies, as has Stephen Moore, a fellow at the conservative Heritage Foundation think tank, whom Trump has also said he wants to nominate for one of two vacant seats on the seven-member Fed Board of Governors in Washington.

But Cain had vowed to fight on in several interviews, and had said he was under attack as a nominee because he is a conservative. Cain's bid for president in 2012 was derailed by accusations of sexual harassment that he has repeatedly denied.

"My friend Herman Cain, a truly wonderful man, has asked me not to nominate him for a seat on the Federal Reserve Board. I will respect his wishes. Herman is a great American who truly loves our Country!" Trump said in a Twitter post.

Cain did not immediately respond to a request for comment on Monday.

Central bank independence from short-term politics is seen as important to prevent influence

NBA star Hassan Whiteside allegedly embezzled by attorney Avenatti

The Miami Heat center allegedly made a $2.75 million payment to Avenatti.

Miami Heat center Hassan Whiteside was allegedly embezzled out of $2.75 million by attorney Michael Avenatti 27 months ago, the Los Angeles Times reported.

Alexis Gardner, a former girlfriend of Whiteside, retained Avenatti to negotiate a potential lawsuit against Whiteside and Avenatti struck a $3 million deal.

Whiteside made an initial $2.75 million payment to Avenatti in January 2017 but none of the money was passed on to Gardner, according to the report.

Avenatti was entitled to just over $1 million in legal fees but hid the payment from Gardner, according to prosecutors, and took $2.5 million to buy a share of a private jet.

Avenatti was indicted on April 10 by a grand jury in Santa Ana, Calif. Gardner is one of five people who had money stolen from them by Avenatti, prosecutors said.

According to prosecutors, Avenatti repeatedly told Gardner that Whiteside wasn't making his payments. Eventually, Avenatti made 11 payments to Gardner over a 15-month period — always misrepresenting them as a payment from Whiteside — totaling $194,000 before stopping in June 2018.

On Sunday, Avenatti commented on his Twitter account, saying in part:

"I look forward to all the details coming out regarding Hassan Whiteside's settlement, the Miami Heat center Hassan Whiteside.

"It is unfortunate that something that was meant to be kept private between us is now being publicly reported."

Whiteside, in a joint statement released by his agent money received by the client, the money deducted for fees and costs, etc. and the reason why he paid the money."

The reason for a $3 million settlement isn't publicly known and Whiteside offered no explanation in a joint statement provided to the Los Angeles Times.

"We entered into a mutually agreed upon settlement more than two years ago following the end of our relationship; a settlement that reflected Alexis' investment of time and support over a number of years as Hassan pursued a career in the NBA," Whiteside and Gardner said in a statement released by Whiteside's agent.

"It is unfortunate that something that was meant to be kept private between us is now being publicly reported. We have both moved on amicably and wish nothing but the best for each other."

Last month, Avenatti was charged with attempting to extort up to $25 million from Nike by threatening to expose misconduct by Nike employees involving payments to college basketball players. He mentioned former Arizona center Deandre Ayton and Oregon big man Bol Bol as players who received money from Nike as recruits.

About 10 days later, Avenatti said the mother of Duke star Zion Williamson was paid by Nike for "bogus consulting services" as part of the deal to get Williamson to choose the Blue Devils.

Avenatti jumped into the public eye when he was the attorney for adult-film star Stormy Daniels during her legal battles with President Donald Trump. He and Daniels parted ways earlier this year.

Whiteside, 29, just completed the third season of a four-year, $98 million contract. He averaged 12.3 points and 11.3 rebounds in 72 games (53 starts) this past season.

EDUCATION

Schools are offering shorter, specialized programs that can be done online. In some cases, companies are picking up the tab for their employees.

letters@metro.us

One of the obstacles to getting an MBA has always been time. Getting an advanced business degree often means taking time away from the job in which you want to grow. And in today's all-consuming work culture, who can afford to take a break? As the cost of higher education grows, that time has become even more expensive.

It's perhaps unsurprising, then, that ap-

Business schools, companies getting creative to stem decline in MBA enrollment plications to full-time, two-year MBA programs were flat in 2018 after four years of decline, according to the Graduate Management Admission Council. Seventy percent of U.S. business schools reported a slide in enrollment last year.

But creative MBA programs are springing up across the country, hoping to buck that trend.

Some schools offer degrees that require less time to complete, can be taken online, or concentrate on relatively new specialties like data analytics. Others have customized programs for certain companies, the Philadelphia Inquirer reported last week.

Drexel University in Philadelphia has created an MBA program especially for investment firm Vanguard. The company pays for employees to take the course, which meets three times a week for two hours near its HQ in Malvern, Pennsylvania. Since the program started in 2014, 100 Vanguard employees have gotten degrees. Some give the initiative high marks for convenience. "Vanguard and Drexel have created a good and seamless transition for us with the satellite campus and flexible working schedules," Emily Magee, an education consulting services manager at Vanguard, told the Inquirer. "The peer group has positively impacted me the most. We've been able to discuss course-related and work-related topics, sometimes simultaneously, allowing us to strengthen our performance at school and work."

Coast to coast, top business schools are loosening up. Like Drexel, Stanford and NYU will work with companies to develop MBA programs for their employees. Cornell allows its MBA students to create customized immersion programs in their particular field. Harvard now offers an accelerated leadership development program it's billing as an alternative to a rapid-fire MBA; the course lasts six months, and half the sessions are done remotely.

And the flexibility doesn't necessarily come with a premium: In Harvard's case, the leadership program costs $52,000 — well below the average cost of a two-year MBA, which stands at about $60,000.

Online MBA programs are also booming, and student satisfaction is high, experts say. "It's common for more than half the students to attribute a raise or a promotion at work as a direct result of their online program," wrote John Byrne of PoetsandQuants.com, a site that covers business schools, in Forbes on Friday. "Even more surprising, 40 percent or more of the students say they have changed jobs entirely thanks to their online degrees."

Celebrate World Book Day 2019!

Put down your phone and tablet for a couple hours to get lost in a new book.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

While yesterday was a day to celebrate and respect the planet where we reside, today marks a day of recognition for those worlds we create in our imaginations, otherwise known as World Book and Copyright Day.

Originally started in 1995 by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), World Book Day was founded to promote reading and the creativity behind each book's publication, as well as copyright.

Every year, World Book and Copyright Day falls on a pretty significant date in the history of literature, as William Shakespeare, Miguel Cervantes and Inca Garcilaso de la Vega all passed away on April 23. The importance of this date was resoundingly agreed upon at UNESCO's first General Conference in Paris in 1995, when they made the decision to recognize World Book Day as a way to pay tribute to books and their authors. The organization is emphatic in its support and describes books as the "most beautiful invention for sharing ideas beyond the boundaries of humanity, space and time, as well as the most powerful forces of poverty eradication and peace building."

"In these turbulent times, books embody the diversity of human ingenuity, giving shape to the wealth of human experience, expressing the search for meaning and expression we all share, that drive all societies forward," said Audrey Azoulay, director-general of UNESCO, in a release. "Books help weave humanity together as a single family, holding a past in common, a history and heritage, to craft a destiny that is shared, where all voices are heard in the great chorus of human aspiration."

Azoulay also outlined that the translation of books into different languages can help us to understand cultural differences and grow closer as members of the international community.

"Books are also a form of cultural expression that lives through a chosen language," Azoulay explained in the release. "Each publication is created in a separate language and is intended for a language-specific reading audience. A book is thus written, produced, exchanged, used and appreciated in a linguistic and cultural setting. This year, we highlight this important dimension because 2019 marks the International Year of the Indigenous Languages, led by UNES-CO, to reaffirm the commitment of the international community in supporting indigenous peoples to their cultures, knowledge, and rights. This day provides an opportunity to reflect together on ways to better disseminate the culture of the written word and to allow all individuals, men, women and children to access it."

The day is celebrated on the same date for every country recognized within the United Nations except for the U.K. and Ireland, which moved the official date to March and still recognize the 23rd with a charity event called World Book Night. Sweden also moved its national book day, back in 2000, to April 13.

While it is easy to lose yourself to convenience by endlessly scrolling on your phone or tablet, we should use this day to not take books for granted.

Make sure to pop into your local library or bookstore on your commute to or from work and pick up something mysterious and exciting. It will help you to remember that there is no greater joy than getting lost in a new book.

THE GYM IS A PLACE TO UNPLUG

I will never understand why people at the gym find it necessary to sit on machines and watch videos and look at pictures while other people are waiting to use the machines. Additionally, people put their phones on the floor near the machines and on the mat in the stretch area; it's like walking through a minefield trying not to step on a phone. The idea of going to the gym is to "unplug" and nurture your body and mind. Unless you are a doctor waiting to be summoned to respond to an emergency, leave your phone in your locker. You will survive an hour without it.

The festival begins tomorrow and runs through May 5.

This Wednesday marks the beginning of the 2019 TriBeCa Film Festival. Every year, the festival showcases some of the best young talents in the film and television industry while hosting special anniversary screenings and thought-provoking talks with legends from both mediums.

This year is no different, with a stacked roster from tomorrow's opening curtain to the closing night screening of Danny Boyle's new film "Yesterday" on Saturday, May 4. We spoke with festival EVP of Communications and Programming Tammie Rosen to see why TriBeCa is so special and to get some of her must-see picks for this year's festival.

"I think the thing about TriBeCa is that you never know what to expect," explains Rosen. "There is a true sense of discovery here. This festival was the first to discover Damien Chazelle and Ryan Coogler. We premiered both of their first films... We think that the idea is really about talent discovery. So, go in for something that you know nothing about because you never know who is going to be the next Oscar-winning director who you experience at the festival, or award-winning documentary."

"The Good, the Bad, the Hungry"

This ESPN documentary, directed by Nicole Lucas Haimes, goes through the storied rivalry between competitive eating's greatest sworn enemies, Japan's Takeru "Kobi" Kobayashi and Californian Joey Chestnut. The film shows the lead-up as they go head-to-head at the Nathan's Hot Dog Eating Contest.

"The Kill Team"

Directed by Dan Krauss, this harrowing film is his narrative adaptation of the documentary that won him Best Documentary at TriBeCa back in 2013. Starring Nat Wolff and Alexander Skarsgard, the film follows an infantryman during the war in Afghanistan who must decide whether or not to report his commanding officer for acting outside the rules of engagement. "For him to come back with this at TriBeCa feels very fitting in terms of having a playground for filmmakers to return [to] and keep doing different things," says Rosen of her excitement on welcoming Krauss back to the festival. "As it won an award, we're really thrilled to show the narrative version of it. I think this is a must-see."

"A Day in the Life of America"

This debut documentary from Jared Leto is sure to blow some minds upon its premiere at TriBeCa. Leto set up 50 different camera crews at 50 different Fourth of July parties across the country to get a sense of who we really are as a country at this moment in history.

"This is everything that you need to know about America right now," says Rosen. "What you get is this very difficult at times survey of the country where you have joyfulness in Maryland, with people celebrating on the beaches, and then people in Chicago who you don't know whether or not there are fireworks or gunshots, then you see people in Middle America hanging out in their KKK outfits having a barbecue. You see what normalcy is and a true slice of life about America. I think, as we lead up to the 2020 election, seeing this and understanding who makes up this country in a non-sensationalized way but in a true visage of a day in the life is so important."

'All I Can Say' is an immersive view into the life and world of an artist navigating the 1990s

The new documentary, shot entirely by late Blind Melon singer Shannon Hoon, premieres Friday at the TriBeCa Film Festival.

JAMES CASE
letters@metro.us

Shannon Hoon, the lead singer of Blind Melon, routinely filmed himself from 1990 to 1995. The footage captures the sum trajectory of Hoon's career. It begins with his roots in rural Indiana, follows his move to Los Angeles, where he forms Blind Melon, and watches their stars rise as they become emblematic figures of music video culture. All the while, Hoon navigates the trappings of substance abuse, which ultimately took his life. The film begins and ends with footage that Hoon captured on the day that he died of an overdose.

Danny Clinch, Taryn Gould and Colleen Hennessy, the film's directors, elected to not present the material accompanied by the typical crutch of talking heads. This is not a typical rock documentary. The film is entirely shot by Hoon and seen from his effusive and endearing perspective and has an absorbing abstract tone. It's clear the group cared deeply about Hoon and presented this deftly edited and extremely personal footage in mind of Hoon's life's truth. Clinch "cut his teeth" as a music photographer with Blind Melon and they were the first to offer him unfettered access. "It meant so much to me and I wanted to honor the band and the people who contributed to it," Clinch said.

Backstage hangouts and footage of the band performing are interspersed with experimental footage. "Being impressionistic and artful in some of these sequences was really important to us and it was clear Shannon was with us," Clinch said. The film serves as a union of Hoon's life and his art, and we watch Hoon develop this aesthetic while we watch his life change. "He was videotaping himself before he was famous, until the day he actually died," said Clinch. The dawn of a self-documenting generation begins as a member of the band posits, "You can get your whole life on video now. No one before us could do that."

Additional footage paints the backdrop of 1990s culture — Hoon films the television as it shows the Rodney King riots and the announcements of the deaths of Jerry Garcia and Kurt Cobain. The memory surfaces that people who had a high profile were still inaccessible back then. Hoon hangs out backstage with Slash and Axl Rose shortly after he moves to L.A. and nobody is taking selfies with anyone.

"Shannon was unafraid and would film anything in any way," Clinch said.

Things take a turn as Blind Melon progress from L.A. outsiders to MTV stalwarts with the song "No Rain" and its music video that explodes in popularity, raising the band's profile in turn. As their artistic lives immediately become more commodifiable, the realities of fame and expectation begin to weigh on Hoon. "When you have a hit like 'No Rain,' it becomes a blessing and a curse. Every journalist they meet and every fan and everyone is talking the same thing and they're talking about the bee girl and the video and that stuff gets overwhelming after a while," Clinch says.

The film is a thoroughly thought-provoking and meditative take on mortality and the nature of artistic ambitions. The audience knows from the very beginning that Hoon will die, and precisely when. This foreknowledge gives a unique inside view on temporality and the unimagined consequences of realizing your ambitions. Hoon mentions wanting to work more in film and develop himself further creatively, and all the while, we can see from the date in the bottom-right corner that he only has a finite number of days left in his life.

The filmmakers wisely employ no voices or narrator telling you what parts of Hoon's life are important or what they think you should know. Hoon's life is presented just as he saw it, and the audience is left to look and listen in wonder at something only as it really was.

'Charlie Says' director Mary Harron on understanding the Manson Family

The film premieres
Thursday at the TriBeCa Film Festival.

patrick.king@metro.us

One of the most chilling movies to premiere at this year's TriBeCa Film Festival is the new feature "Charlie Says" that deals with the inner workings of the Manson Family before their infamous murders that brought an end to the spirit of the '60s.

The film stars "Dr. Who's" 11th doctor, Matt Smith, in a truly mesmerizing performance as Manson and follows the point of view of one of his followers Lucy Van Houten, played by Hannah Murray of "Game of Thrones," who ended up partaking in the horrific murders of Sharon Tate and her unborn child as well as many others. The film was adapted from the book written by Karlene Faith and directed by "American Psycho" and "Alias Grace" director Mary Harron. We spoke with Harron ahead of the film's premiere at the TriBeCa Film Festival about understanding the long, ugly shadow of the Manson Family.

This movie puts the viewer in the headspace of Manson's followers. What was it like exploring that perspective?

I think that was what was most interesting to me. I thought, if you're going to do it, then you have to go and really follow the journey of the women who really were involved with these crimes. Sometimes people take the Linda Kasabian [a famous member of the Manson Family] story, who was the one who turned in case evidence and didn't participate in the murders. That, to me, wasn't interesting. You really want to take on the difficult issues of people that you like, if you follow their stories and end up doing these horrific things and you ask, "How did this happen?"

Why do you think this story is so relevant after so many years?

Anybody of my generation who was a teenager during these things, it's part of our DNA, really. There is a lot of fascination of how this could have happened, how could this lovely hippy culture end up this way — at least with the darkest manifestation of it. I think there is a lot of fascination with cults because it's the idea of you and me or sisters and brothers and children, regular people, joining groups and then becoming transformed into a group mind, in some cases doing terrible things, whether it's people accepting suicide or people being asked to commit awful crimes. How do people get to this point? Because it's still happening!

I worked with a lovely young woman, Allison Mack, who turned out to be a part of that NXIVM cult that is currently on trial. I actually worked with her and she was very nice! I think we're always fascinated with things that we can't quite solve. That to me, is the most interesting mystery. Not who did it, because we know who did it. But, how did they come to it?

One thing that is truly prevalent with Charles Manson, and other manipulative figures throughout history, was his innate sense that he could sense people's vulnerabilities and capitalize on it. Do you think that is why he was such a magnetic character?

Yes. I had already read certain books years ago and Guinevere [Turner, the film's screenwriter] had done a lot of research. It was most interesting to me, actually reading the books written by the followers. What I was interested in was the real texture of their experiences. What was the day-to-day life like of the cult? I remember very early on, before I even took this project on, I was having lunch with Guinevere and she was telling me about the script that she was writing. I wasn't even attached to it. I asked her, "How did he get them to do these terrible things?" and she said, "Step by step." We were trying to capture that in this film, that slow evolution. Little by little, your autonomy is worn away. Which also happens, I think, in domestic abuse. You meet someone who is very charming and charismatic and then they enter a relationship — and they can be a super smart and intelligent, capable person — and step by step, they lose themselves and end up abused, dominated and lose their own will.

Discussions you need to check out at the TriBeCa Film Festival

While the TriBeCa Film Festival is known for bringing fresh new voices in filmmaking to the world, the festival is also known for curating special anniversary screenings and talks around some of the most trailblazing works in both film and television. This year is going to be no different, as some of the most monumental films and series will be celebrating milestone anniversaries with the creators giving special talks at this year's ceremonies. Here are three great screenings and discussions that you will not want to miss.

The 35th Anniversary of "This Is Spinal Tap"

What can't be said about the movie "This Is Spinal Tap"? The groundbreaking mockumentary pretty much laid the groundwork for shows like "The Office" and "Parks and Recreation" and is still arguably one of the funniest movies ever made. For a special evening at the Beacon Theatre, the stars of the film — Christopher Guest, Michael McKean and Harry Shearer — will be stepping out of character and doing a Q&A with the film's director Rob Reiner and playing music in tribute to the band.

"This is a big, fun thing for anyone who has ever loved 'Spinal Tap' and the perfect way for anyone who has never seen 'Spinal Tap' to see the film," says Rosen. Saturday, April 27, 8 p.m., Beacon Theatre, 2124 Broadway

The 30th Anniversary of "The Simpsons"

Over the past 30 years, "The Simpsons" has been there every step of the way to make fun of our modern lives as they hurdle into the future. While it's debatable whether the wit and precision of the show has begun to wear away as time goes by, it remains one of the gold standards in a field of comedy that it helped to create. At this special anniversary celebration, fans will be treated to screenings of some of the show's most famous episodes with a roundtable discussion conducted by Lisa Simpson herself,

Robert Duvall on the set of the film "Apocalypse Now." GETTY IMAGES

"Apocalypse Now: The Final Cut"

The production of Francis Ford Coppola's magnum opus "Apocalypse Now" may have as great a story as the one that was portrayed on the screen. With rumors that Coppola had intended for the film to be hours longer in length, fans of the film were finally treated to a "Redux" version of the film back in 2001 that included close to an hour's worth of extra footage. Apparently, this version was still a work in progress. That is, until now, as Coppola will be there in person to present his "Final" version of the film at the Beacon Theatre with a completely remastered print from the original negatives and a special sound system installed in the theater for this special occasion. "It should be the spectacular high-cinema evening that anyone who has ever loved a film from Francis Ford Coppola [would expect]," says TriBeCa EVP of Communications and Programming Tammie Rosen. Sunday, April 28, 5 p.m., Beacon Theatre, 2124 Broadway

'Livid' Nets look to stay alive vs. Sixers in Game 5 tonight

After a tough loss Saturday, the Nets have set their sights on the officials.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The Brooklyn Nets' backs are against the wall tonight as they face elimination in Game 5 of their first-round playoff series against the Philadelphia 76ers, who hold a commanding 3-1 lead.

Heading back to Philadelphia after being swept at home, the Nets are still sifting through the rubble of a missed opportunity in Game 4 that featured an ejection of Jared Dudley in a fracas surrounding another hard Joel Embiid foul on Jarrett Allen and a blown lead in the final minute of play.

The Nets led for approximately 26 of the final 28 minutes of the game, but it was the officiating that threw Brooklyn into a frenzy.

General Manager Sean Marks was fined $25,000 and suspended from attending Game 5 in Philadelphia after entering the officials' locker room following Game 4.

Per ESPN's Adrian

Tensions are running high for the Nets as they face elimination. GETTY IMAGES

Wojnarowski, Marks was "livid" that Embiid was not administered a Flagrant 2 after his hack in the third quarter against a driving Allen, which would have resulted in a suspension.

The Philadelphia star's actions, coupled with his elbow on Allen during Game 2, sparked a scuffle under the Nets' basket when Dudley pushed Embiid. While Embiid played innocent, Jimmy Butler and Ben Simmons got into the mix before a mosh pit formed around the players.

Embiid, when healthy, has torched the Nets this series, including a monster outing on Saturday when he put up 31 points, 16 rebounds, seven assists and six blocks. His absence down the stretch could have resulted in the Nets securing a win rather than giving it up.

Brooklyn's beef with the officials grew when Simmons wasn't called for a shove on Allen, which resulted in JJ Redick's go-ahead 3-pointer with 50 seconds remaining.

During the Nets' penultimate possession of the game, Allen was wrapped up by Tobias Harris on a pick-and-roll play that allowed Simmons to get into position defensively and help force a turnover that iced Philadelphia's victory.

The NBA confirmed in its Last Two Minute Report that a foul should have been called on Harris, but that does little to change the fact that the Nets are in a 3-1 series rather than one that is tied.

Nets head coach Kenny Atkinson made his dissatisfaction with the officials clear, especially with his team, an unnamed player told Newsday's Greg Logan.

"He basically said it will keep happening until the refs buy into the fact that the Nets are good," Logan tweeted.

The player went on to tell Logan that the NBA "is a business, and implied refs are aware of which teams they want to succeed. So, teams like the Nets trying to establish themselves are facing an uphill climb."

"But let's say they sign a premier free agent. Watch how quickly it turns."

Expect the bad blood between the teams, along with the Nets and the officials, to carry into Game 5 tonight, which may result in a tightly-called game.

Tip-off is at 8 p.m. ET and can be seen on TNT.

Thierry Henry played with the Red Bulls from 2010 to 2014. GETTY IMAGES

New York Red Bulls denying links to Henry as manager

The French soccer legend was reported to be joining his former team within the next week.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Red Bulls denied all reports that former player and international legend Thierry Henry will be taking over as their new manager on Monday.

Kaveh Solhekol of Sky Sports reported over the weekend that the MLS club had "given the green light" to hire Henry as its new manager. Solhekol added that the Red Bulls' head of soccer, Oliver Mintzlaff, was expected to fly to London next week to finalize the deal.

Henry spent four seasons with the Red Bulls, from 2010 to 2014, as one of the first major international stars to make his way to MLS. He ranks third on the club's all-time scoring list with 52 goals in all competitions.

The Frenchman was one of the greatest stars of his generation overseas, best known for his goal-scoring prowess with Arsenal in England and Barcelona in Spain, all while starring for the French national team, which included a World Cup title in 1998.

Henry, 41, began his managerial career with the Arsenal youth academy before joining the Belgian national team as an assistant in 2016, where he helped the program finish third at the 2018 World Cup in Russia.

He received his first professional manager job with French side Monaco — the club he first played with — in October 2018.

It was a disastrous spell as he lasted just 109 days after winning just two of his first 12 matches at a club that qualified for the Champions League in each of the previous four seasons.

Henry was linked to a Red Bulls team that has been struggling just as mightily under Chris Armas, winning just one of their first seven matches with just eight goals scored during that stretch.

The Red Bulls were developing into an Eastern Conference power under Jesse Marsch, who led the club to three top three finishes in four seasons before moving on to Red Bull Leipzig in the Bundesliga last year as an assistant.

He was named the club's manager on April 15.

While Henry would have had his hands full trying to turn things around, he would have brought a knowledge of MLS and the American game to the position along with a high-profile face that would help market the team during a disappointing campaign.

Giants' draft plans may revolve around Rosen

The Cardinals quarterback will be on the trade block if they draft Kyler Murray.

JOE PANTORNO
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The biggest factor of the first round of the 2019 NFL Draft, which begins Thursday night, isn't even a collegiate prospect that's ready to make the jump to the pros.

It's second-year quarterback Josh Rosen.

The future of the Arizona Cardinals passer — who was selected 10th overall last season — is in the hands of his new head coach in Kliff Kingsbury, who has been predicted by many to take Oklahoma product and reigning Heisman Trophy winner Kyler Murray with the first overall pick.

Should the Cardinals go that route, it is expected that Rosen will be traded within the first two days of the draft and could play a huge role in what the New York Giants do at No. 6.

Giants General Manager Dave Gettleman has had months to put together a plan to find Eli Manning's successor, which was initially believed to be via the draft this year.

While there are still plenty of detractors claiming that choosing Saquon Barkley with the second pick last year was the wrong move considering the deep class of passers available, the organization still has an opportunity in 2019 to choose their talent to mold into the next franchise quarterback.

Ohio State's Dwayne Haskins, Missouri's Drew Lock and Duke's Daniel

Jones are expected to be available at No. 6 for the Giants. Haskins is considered the best pure passer in the draft class and has stated his desire to play for the Giants, his boyhood team growing up in New Jersey.

Lock remains an option, but the notion of Jones being selected by the Giants has picked up some steam as of late even though notable draft pundits like Todd McShay have predicted that the Duke product will develop into nothing more than a backup at the NFL level.

Also owning the No. 17 pick of the draft after trading away Odell Beckham Jr., the Giants could select an edge rusher like Kentucky's Josh Allen with the sixth pick, even though it would result in losing out on Haskins.

It seems to be the most likely scenario, as McShay reported on ESPN's "Get Up" Monday morning, that Gettleman "is crazed about getting a pass-rusher with this sixth pick."

That second pick in the first round would then be used to take the best available quarterback, whether it is Lock or Jones.

The possible availability of Rosen, though, would likely see the Giants abandon any thought of taking a quarterback and could result in the team drafting for another area of need, whether it be at wide receiver, cornerback or offensive line.

At just 22 years old, Rosen could then redshirt the 2019 season while learning and perfecting the Giants offense under Manning, who is entering the final season of his contract with New York.

It would allow the UCLA product to properly acclimate to the NFL, which was something he was unable to do during his rookie season in Arizona.

Behind one of the worst offensive lines in football with subpar playmaking talent outside of Larry Fitzgerald, Rosen struggled mightily in 2018, completing just 55.2 percent of his passes for 2,278 yards with 11 touchdowns and 14 interceptions.

If put behind a stronger offensive line with a better set of receivers, Rosen could flourish in New York and meet those high expectations that were set on him prior to the 2018 draft.
